Where to Eat and Drink in Jackson Hole

Bin22

Tyler was his over-the-top self in this wine shop / tapas restaurant. The front of Bin22 serves as a wine shop, with hundreds of wines from around the world on display. We didn't have a reservation and used our "20-30 minute wait" to check out all the wine. For dinner, make sure you order one of the the mozzarella cheese plates. And on your way out, grab a bucket of the mini ice cream sandwiches from the freezer in the wine shop for dessert.

The Kitchen

This was probably our favorite restaurant experience, although I'm sure all of the excitement from the proposal earlier that day helped with that. The staff at The Kitchen was kind and helpful, and the food was on another level. If you do one thing right while you're in Jackson Hole, go to The Kitchen and order the Luxury Shrimp. Tyler and Tim were so obsessed they got a second order. When does that happen? Our server told us that they once took the shrimp off the menu and faced a near-mutiny from a group of regular customers. Thankfully, it's back on the rotation for good.
