

TODAY: Jackson chef represents Wyoming in national TV special

Screenshot from the Today Show's "United Plates of Thanksgiving" promotional spot, featuring a glimpse of Wyoming chef Gavin Fine.

Gavin Fine of Fine Dining Restaurant Group in Jackson Hole will represent the state of Wyoming for a special Thanksgiving week feature of the Today Show, "United Plates of Thanksgiving."

Featuring 52 recipes from 52 chefs from across the country, the Today Show is celebrating "all the flavors of America" in what producers are billing as the morning show's "biggest Thanksgiving event ever."

In the Nov. 27 morning show, which begins at 7 a.m. Eastern Time, all 52 chefs will be present for the live broadcast from Rockefeller Plaza in New York City, according to Kendra Alessandro, director of communications for Fine Dining Restaurant Group.

Fine's chosen recipe is a Bovine and Swine Andouille Cornbread Stuffing with Huckleberries, which he chose to represent some of the iconic flavors of Wyoming: amazing meats handmade in Jackson Hole, fresh huckleberries that are native to the area and local craft beer.

Information on the show is available on the Today Show's website, and so is Fine's recipe so that you can cook it up at home for your Thanksgiving dinner (<https://www.today.com/recipes/bovine-swine-andouille-cornbread-stuffing-huckleberries-recipe-t167990>).

You can even catch a glimpse of Fine in the show's promotional video here.