

goop

Everything You Need to Know to Plan a Trip to Jackson Hole

Jackson Hole is a skier's town—a place where the ski-obsessed will find fierce steeps, chutes, and plenty of tree skiing across the mountain's 2,500 acres. But it's also a place where you can choose your own adventure—on or off the slopes. We love the mix of excellent restaurants, world-class hotels, and amazing vintage shops. And it's only gotten easier to visit—during the season, there are nonstop flights from almost every major city in the US.

WHERE TO EAT & DRINK

Rendezvous Bistro

Chef-owner Gavin Fine moved to Jackson in 1996 like so many before him—he wanted to ski. He quickly jump-started the good-food-in-a-mountain-town movement with the opening of Rendezvous Bistro back in 2001, a French bistro where you could cozy up to the raw bar and order oysters and a nice glass of New Zealand Pinot. Over the last two decades in Jackson, Fine has earned himself the nickname “the Danny Meyer of Jackson Hole” and opened up seven restaurants along the way.

The Kitchen

Also in town, the Kitchen is a small but mighty sixty-four-seat spot that has a crudo bar and dishes with Asian flair. The tempura shrimp with sweet and spicy aioli is a serious crowd-pleaser.

Il Villaggio Osteria

Over in Teton Village, inside the Hotel Terra, Fine set up Il Villaggio Osteria, which has quickly become a go-to for its wood-fired pizzas, including the 'Nduja, topped with ricotta and orange goat cheese.

WHERE TO GO FOR THE APRÈS PART

Bodega Jackson Hole

In warmer months, a food truck hawking fried chicken sandwiches and tacos is parked outside Bodega, but if you're in need of a roadie, this is the place for Sloshies (alcohol-spiked slushies) and draft beers brewed by Roadhouse. There are also plenty of fancy gourmet condiments, cheeses, and charcuterie, Bovine & Swine sausages, and more to fill up your pantry. Don't miss the take-and-bake frozen pizza from nearby Il Villaggio Osteria. It's a good pit stop on your way from the mountain back into town, especially if you're staying in a house or condo with a group.

Bin 22

Back in town, Bin 22 has a little bit of everything: There's a wine shop slash high-end grocery shop and a tapas bar that serves up house-pulled mozzarella, confit piquillo peppers, and patatas bravas at high communal tables. A tip: Pick up a bottle of wine at the shop, and the bar will waive a corkage fee and open it up for you during your visit.

