There's now a name for the restaurant that will operate at The Cloudveil, the Center Street hotel opening this spring.

"The Bistro."

If that rings a bell, it should. It will be the the latest restaurant opened by Gavin Fine, co-founder of Fine Dining Restaurant Group, whose first restaurant was Rendezvous Bistro.

The company announced a few months ago that Rendezvous Bistro will close at the end of the 2020-21 ski season after 20 years in business.

"It felt like the right time to end one chapter and begin another," Fine said in a press release. "We look forward to sticking to our French bistro roots while creating a completely new dining experience for guests with the opening of The Bistro."

Naming the new place "The Bistro," the release said, "pays homage to FDRG's roots, as will the raw bar and a handful of rotating dishes." In addition to indoor tables in a "modern interior" the new restaurant will have "European-style sidewalk dining."

The Cloudveil, a Crystal Creek Capital property that's part of Marriott's Autograph Collection, will have 100 rooms and suites.
