

A photograph of a rooftop deck at dusk. A man is sitting on a lounge chair, looking towards the camera. The deck is furnished with various outdoor seating, including armchairs and sofas. The background shows a cityscape with lights visible in the distance.

Deck Dining

// BY SAMANTHA SIMMA

Summer in Jackson Hole practically insists you eat outside, and there's no shortage of restaurants to help you oblige.

THE CLOUDVEIL

Set above the bustle of Town Square, The Rooftop at The Cloudveil is both chic and relaxed—it has fire pits and armchairs and sofas instead of dining tables—and has one of downtown Jackson's most interesting vantage points. Snow King is right there, looking close enough to touch, and then, from 6 to 6:10 p.m. Monday through Saturday, there's the Town Square Shootout directly below. But you have to make sure The Rooftop, which offers table service, is open. An understandably popular venue for private parties, The Rooftop releases the dates it's open to the public for the next month toward the end of the prior month.

Food and drinks are as lively and casual as the vibes: shareable mains and appetizers like tacos and pizzas, soshies, and frosé. "An evening spent on The Rooftop celebrates the best of a summer evening in Jackson Hole," says Kendra Alessandro, vice president of marketing and communications at Fine Dining Restaurant Group. Grab a cocktail and a quick bite before heading to a concert or dinner elsewhere. Or settle in for a longer evening. "For those interested in capturing the sun and also enjoying a full dinner, mid-evening is perfect," Alessandro says. Later still, the kitchen closes, but the bar remains open and welcomes you to linger over a nightcap as the pink glow of sunset spreads across the valley.

Open at 5 p.m. select evenings (check @thebistroatjacksonhole);
112 Center St., Jackson; 307/739-1100, thebistrojacksonhole.com/rooftop