

Room Request! The Cloudveil

Sure, you could stay on the mountain in Jackson Hole, Wyoming. But, you'd be missing out

Written by Alyssa Giacobbe

Jackson, Wyoming, is perhaps best known as a ski town—it gets an average 458 inches of snow each winter—and indeed Jackson Hole Mountain Resort offers something for nearly every level of skier or rider, even the East Coast-groomed who have no idea what to do with this much powder. (Buy your 23/24 Ikon Pass early for limited-time savings on lodging and year-round savings on gear.) Still, locals will tell you (or more likely they won't) that summer in Jackson is even more spectacular. That's when the Tetons are ripe for hiking, biking, and climbing; the Snake River is full of trout to be fished; and a ride on JHMR's aerial tram offers easy access to alpine hiking and running trails plus the sort of jaw-dropping views that remind you how big the world really is.

No matter the season, by far the best choice for lodging is The Cloudveil, the town's only hotel on the historic Town Square, which during winter hosts an ice rink and a direct path to the equally historic honky-tonk Million Dollar Cowboy Bar—where you will literally saddle up to the bar on stools made of old saddles—as well as to several of the town's best restaurants. The hotel is a modern take on Western-chic, with custom leather furnishings, granite-filled baths, works by local artists (many of whom take up temporary residence in the lobby), and plenty of reclaimed wood. 100 rooms include 11 suites. During ski season, the hotel partners with concierge rental company Black Tie Skis to deliver top of the line, demo-quality rental equipment to the hotel; Black Tie will also take care of getting you to and from the mountain, where you've got exclusive access to a de facto lodge and techs on hand all day long who'll work hard to find you your perfect fit.

WHAT MAKES THE PROPERTY SO SPECIAL IN THE SUMMER?

Our rooftop is open in the summer providing locals and guests a spot to enjoy the outdoors. The rooftop overlooks Jackson's historic town square and The Bistro offers a rooftop menu and full bar. In the wintertime, the wood burning fireplace in our lobby is the perfect location to enjoy a hot toddy, share some time with your fellow guests reminiscing about your adventures, play a board game, and listen to live music.
